Sunny Brook Farm consists of a 2 ½-story hip-roofed brick house and a group of outbuildings including a barn with louvered vents on a stone foundation. The house is laid in common stretcher bond on the south façade and 5- to 6-course common bond on the east and west facades. The south façade is covered by a two-story shed-roofed porch with chamfered square posts and a balustrade composed of X-shaped balusters. The house and porch stand on a stone foundation, exposed on the south side. The house is built into a south-facing slope, and the north portion of the foundation is not exposed. The principal entrance is in the center bay of the three-bay south façade. It is surmounted by an 8-light transom and flanked by two-light sidelights and pilasters. Windows are 6/6 sash with splayed jack arches. The second floor central bay also holds an entrance, with a transom. The east façade is four bays wide. The southernmost two bays are of brick, with 6/6 sash windows with jack arches. The next bay to the north is of frame, containing an entrance in the first floor and a 6/6 window above. The northernmost bay is of brick, with 6/6 windows. The west façade is also four bays wide, but all of brick. No window appears above the entrance in the next-to-northernmost bay, but the door has a four-light transom. Large interior chimneys stand on the east and west sides of the house, above the wide area between the southern two bays. A balustraded deck or "widow's walk" caps the peak of the standing-seam hip roof. A one-story, one-bay gable-roofed stone addition stands at the northeast corner of the house, attached to the north wall.

Both the Martenet's Map of Carroll County, Maryland from 1862 and the Lake, Griffing & Stevenson Atlas of 1877 depict this house as the residence of David W. Snader. According to the list of patrons of the Atlas, Snader owned 130 acres, and was listed as a farmer in the New Windsor district, having been born in Carroll County in 1829.
